5 Questions OnlyFans Creators should ask when choosing a new platform

Thursday 26 August, 2021

In light of recent OnlyFans announcements, many creators are feeling unsure of which direction to turn.

Savvy creators are using this interval as a chance to do their homework before making their next move.

And if creators can take one thing away from recent events,it is that your content business is only as secure as the platform you choose to build it on.

To help creators make an informed choice, SoSpoilt has put together 5 questions OnlyFans creators should ask when choosing a new platform.

1. Is the platform established?

A lot of platforms have popped up in just the past year so it's important for creators to do their research before moving all their hard work and content over there.

And with the large volume of creators looking to jump ship, it's important the platform they choose is able to handle the load.

Look for platforms that are established and have been operating for a large amount of time with a history of paying creators successfully.

Creators should look into how long the company's been in business and who is behind it. If this information isn't easy to find, they should think twice about joining.

2. How can you earn?

Different creator platforms offer different ways to earn from content. As well as fan subscriptions, some allow payments from messages, live chats, and tips.

All platforms will take a percentage of earnings (this is known as the platform fee).

But, some take more than others, have restrictions about when you can cash out, and may not handle VAT in line with UK and EU regulations.

SoSpoilt allows creators to sell content subscriptions directly to their fans. Fans can also pay to live stream, pay-per-minute chat, message, or tip their favourite creators.

Plus, creators can supplement their income from fans, by landing paid collaborations or sponsorship deals with brands in SoSpoilt's network.

3. Are your earnings secure?

Creators should look for platforms that are compliant with the rules that matter to them and their content.

These include paying creators in their home currency, low platform fees, and handling all applicable VAT or Sales Taxes for creators, as they should be by law.

SoSpoilt lets creators set their prices and cash out regularly. What's more, payments are safe and direct, so chunks of earnings aren't lost to third-party processors.

There's no need to stress about VAT either. SoSpoilt is designed to handle applicable VAT for creators in line with UK and EU regulations. The platform determines exactly how much VAT to charge for each transaction so creators will never be caught out.

4. Do you have creative freedom?
