

Aero Partners With Matthew Williamson to Create an Exclusive Wrapper Design

Monday 21 September, 2015

Nestlé Confectionery's bubbly chocolate brand AERO has unveiled a collaboration with British fashion designer Matthew Williamson to create a beautiful limited edition wrapper design.

The new high-fashion design will feature on AERO Milk Chocolate and AERO Peppermint single bars, with stock available from 28th September.

The new-look packaging is an update on Matthew's signature butterfly print; vibrant and beautifully crafted, taking cues from the bubbly nature of AERO's famous texture, while all the time channelling the fun-loving and indulgent spirit that Matthew is best known for. Combining an exciting fusion of soft pink and mint shades, subtly highlighted with luxurious metallic tones, Williamson has created a feminine design that celebrates the key elements of AERO.

Designer, Matthew Williamson said: "When I began gathering inspiration for the design, I instantly saw a synergy between the unique bubbly texture of the AERO chocolate and my past work with the butterfly motif. Both have an essence of spontaneity and feeling free so the basis for my design was clear from the off."

Rob Marsh, Senior Brand Manager for AERO, Nestlé UK & Ireland added: "Matthew Williamson is a well-known high-fashion designer and we are thrilled to have worked with him on this project. These limited edition wrappers are an eye-catching celebration of British design and bubbly AERO chocolate. We're excited to see Matthew's beautiful wrappers on shelves this autumn."

This autumn will also see the total AERO brand benefit from a £2 million media campaign, including Outdoor, Digital and Video On Demand advertising*. Within this, the Matthew Williamson limited edition bars will benefit from bespoke digital activity on Facebook designed to bring the campaign to life.
