Ching He Huang's Top Cookery Tips

1. Ching's essential store-cupboard ingredients include: Amoy Light Soy Sauce, Amoy Dark Soy Sauce, Shaohsing rice wine, toasted sesame oil, five-spice powder, Sichuan peppercorns, Chinkiang black rice vinegar, clear rice vinegar, chilli bean sauce, chilli sauce

2. Look after your wok – stir frying requires high heat, which woks are specially designed to withstand.

Let your wok cool down after cooking, if you submerge in water straight away the metal can distort. To clean, wipe with a soft sponge in warm soapy water and rinse. Dry carbon steel woks on the hob before wiping with oil to keep 'seasoned'.

3. Ensure your ingredients are roughly the same size for even cooking. The most common mistake with stir frying is to throw all the ingredients in at the same time – the ingredients that take the least time to cook, such as pak choy, go in right near the end.

4. Preparation is key to ensuring a successful stir fry. Make stocks, chop vegetables and have spices to hand before turning on the heat.

5. Cutting on the diagonal Diagonal cutting exposes more of the vegetable's surface area to the heat, making it cook quickly and allowing it to absorb more of the sauces and seasonings.

6. Use the holy trinity of Chinese cooking - plenty of garlic, ginger and chillies. These are high in antioxidants and vitamin C, just a few seconds in the wok stir fried with your favourite ingredients will keep your immune system on track.

7. Cooking wine – many Chinese recipes contain cooking wine in the ingredients – the genuine article is usually Shaoxing rice wine, but if you don't have any to hand you can use pale dry sherry as a good replacement.

8. Make sure you choose the right oil. Oils with a high heating point work best, such as sunflower, groundnut and vegetable oil. Avoid toasted sesame oil as it has a low heating point and burns quickly – use this for seasoning your dishes instead

9. Get your wok hot enough before cooking. Heat it to a high heat until it starts to smoke before adding your oil.

10. Keep meat moist when stir-frying by sprinkling with a few drops of Amoy Dark Soy Sauce and dusting in a light coating of potato flour or cornflour before adding to the wok??
