With unpredictable weather expected to continue into September and the end of the school summer holidays now upon us, the UK's leading holiday brands, Thomson and First Choice, have seen a range of destinations growing in popularity as adults look to escape abroad to spend some last-minute, child-free fun in the sun.

With highs of 32 degrees in the Caribbean, 35 degrees in Cyprus and even 30 degrees in Spain in early September compared to lows of 8 degrees in the UK, it's easy to see why Brits are heading off to warmer climates.

The holiday companies have seen an increase in bookings to short haul destinations in the past week* with bookings to the Costa del Sol, Spain increasing by 20% and a 72% increase in holidays to Costa Brava compared to this time last year. Europe's rising star, Croatia remains a popular choice for those looking for a new experience before summer ends, with bookings up by 84% in the last week compared to this time last year. The islands of Menorca and Majorca are also proving popular with holiday makers not wanting to venture too far for their last minute break.

Mid haul getaways are also on the rise as UK weather turns colder with Mediterranean hotspot Cyprus proving to be popular with a 43% rise. Holiday makers looking to venture further afield have set their sights on sunny Jamaica which has seen a 39% rise in bookings in the past week compared to 2014.

With the end of the summer season approaching, the holiday companies are anticipating a strong winter 2015 with an extensive range of direct flights to exotic destinations like Thailand and Mexico on board the Thomson 787 Dreamliner, as well as the introduction of a new six week programme to picturesque winter beauty spot, Iceland for January to March 2016. November 2015 will also see tropical paradise, Costa Rica added to the long haul programme, served by the first direct flight from the UK, connecting adventurers with Central America's famous rainforests and wildlife.
