Avoid the bank holiday rush with courier parcel delivery, says Parcel2Go

Friday 24 August, 2012

Parcel delivery specialist Parcel2Go has advised customers to make sure they organise shipping ahead of the bank holiday to avoid the expected rush.

Those that have parcels to send ahead of the upcoming three day weekend should get started on arranging their parcel deliveries as soon as possible; otherwise they may find that their parcels get caught up around the bank holiday, which lands on Monday 27th August this year. There is always a rush of deliveries around important annual holidays such as Easter and Christmas, but bank holidays can also cause some delivery disruptions.

However, as Richard Mercer of Parcel2Go has said: "At Parcel2Go we can provide customers with a comprehensive delivery service from some of the best courier companies in the world, so no matter where parcels need to be delivered to we can help. By using a courier service customers will be able to get their parcels there in time for the bank holiday, so there will be no risk of delayed deliveries."

Following the bank holiday there is likely to be a spike in the number of people ordering goods online due to the bank holiday sales, so using a courier company could assist in getting parcels through this increased shipping activity. Courier companies are able to assist customers with high speed delivery services and reasonable postage rates, along with handy delivery features such as parcel collection, parcel tracking and use of Parcel2Go's postcode finder.

Parcel2Go works with courier companies such as Yodel, Hermes, Parcelforce and TNT for UK deliveries, while those after international parcel delivery can choose from overseas couriers like FedEx, Parcel2Go Express and TNT Economy for overseas deliveries to locations such as Europe, the USA, Canada and Asia, as well as delivering to all other countries around the world.
