Brewing Support: Celebrities and artists donate Beermat Art to aid Testicular Cancer Awareness

Friday 17 May, 2024

An extraordinary collection of beermat artworks, crafted by an array of celebrities, global artists, and illustrators, was recently showcased at Saltspace in Glasgow, hosted by Cahonas Scotland, the nation's leading testicular cancer education, awareness, and support charity.

This vibrant exhibition, which precedes a significant charity auction, featured the creative contributions of over 200 distinguished figures including Alan Cumming, Dame Helen Mirren, Joe Lycett, Sir Ian McKellen, Amy Macdonald, Joanna Lumley, and Courtney Love.

Adding to the roster of talent, this year's line-up also boasted works from notable artists such as Julian Opie, Anita Klein, and Kaffe Fasset, alongside beloved cartoonist Ralph Steadman and Wallace and Gromit creator Nick Park.

These unique pieces, all crafted on simple beermats, have now been made available for bidding in an online auction that will continue until the 26th of May. Art enthusiasts and supporters can place their bids by visiting www.beermatsforballs.com, where a full catalogue of the artwork is listed.

The proceeds from this auction will support Cahonas Scotland's life-saving educational programmes and support services, aiding individuals affected by testicular cancer.

This event is particularly poignant as it was born from a simple yet inspiring idea doodled on a beermat by Cahonas' founder, Ritchie Marshall. Marshall's vision has not only brought together a community of artists and celebrities but has also spotlighted the critical importance of awareness and early detection of testicular cancer.

Ritchie Marshall commented on the motivation behind the initiative, saying, "This event exemplifies how a small idea can have a monumental impact on awareness and education. We are incredibly grateful for the overwhelming support and enthusiasm from all the participants."

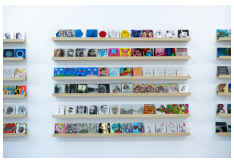

Cahonas Scotland continues to lead the charge in educating the public and supporting those battling testicular cancer. For more information on Testicular Cancer visit www.cahonasscotland.org
