

British Wheel of Yoga (BWY) and British Taekwondo Collaborate to Pilot Innovative Health and Fitness Product

Monday 19 June, 2023

The British Wheel of Yoga (BWY) and British Taekwondo are pleased to announce their collaboration in piloting a ground-breaking health and fitness product aimed at young people and adults aged 13 and above. This collaboration is part of Sport England's 'Uniting the Movement' strategy and seeks to combine the benefits of yoga and Taekwondo to enhance the mental and physical wellbeing of younger people in Britain.

The new product combines controlled breathing, meditation techniques and sport-specific yoga sequences with high-intensity Taekwondo, all taught in a non-contact setting. By merging these two disciplines, the collaboration aims to provide young adults with a holistic approach to fitness, mindfulness, and self-development.

Currently being piloted in ten British Taekwondo-affiliated member clubs across the country with the view to expanding its availability to a wider audience later in the year, the product aligns with Sport England's 'Uniting the Movement' strategy to inspire more young people to take part in physical activities for improved health and wellbeing. According to Sport England's recent Active Lives report, there are now half a million fewer active young people (age 16-34) than in November 2015-16 and addressing this decline has become its priority.

"By joining forces with British Taekwondo, we seek to empower younger adults to embrace an active and healthy lifestyle," said Di O'Reilly, BWY Chair. "Together, we can provide more accessible avenues for younger people to experience yoga's powerful wellbeing benefits."

Ian Leafe, Chief Executive Officer of British Taekwondo said "British Taekwondo are thrilled to be collaborating with the British Wheel of Yoga. The aim of our new Taekwondo Health & Fitness programme is to provide a unique and different offering to clubs and communities and is a product we feel extremely excited about."
