

BWY and Parkinson's UK partner to bring accessible yoga to people with Parkinson's

Monday 9 February, 2026

The British Wheel of Yoga (BWY), the UK's largest yoga charity and National Governing Body for yoga in England and Wales, has partnered with Parkinson's UK to make yoga more accessible for people living with Parkinson's, their families and carers.

On Friday 10 April, to mark World Parkinson's Day (11 April), the organisations will host a free 45-minute online chair yoga class designed specifically for people with Parkinson's, those who support them, and yoga teachers keen to adapt their classes for this community.

Led by Special Yoga Teacher and BWY Tutor Richard Kravetz, the session will share safe, practical movements and breathing techniques that can be done seated, with or without additional support.

Recent figures from Parkinson's UK estimate that around 166,000 people in the UK are currently living with a Parkinson's diagnosis, with figures expected to rise due to an ageing population. Parkinson's is a progressive neurological condition that affects movement, causing symptoms such as tremor, stiffness and slowness.

A recent study of the effects of yoga on people with Parkinson's disease found that yoga improved motor function, balance, functional mobility, anxiety, depression and quality of life in people with Parkinson's.

BWY Chair, Diana O'Reilly comments: 'Yoga can be hugely beneficial for people with Parkinson's. Gentle chair-based practices can be adapted for almost everyone, which means people can participate safely whether they are newly diagnosed or have been living with Parkinson's for many years. Through this partnership, we want to give more teachers the tools they need to welcome people with Parkinson's into their classes and to make sure no one feels that yoga 'isn't for them'.'

Jed Parsons, Physical Activity Delivery Manager for Parkinsons UK, comments: 'I'm really excited about our partnership with the British Wheel of Yoga because it has the potential to make a genuine, lasting difference for people living with Parkinson's. Yoga can be a powerful way to support strength, balance, mobility and wellbeing, but too often people feel that classes aren't accessible or suitable for them.'

By working together, we can give yoga teachers the confidence, skills and understanding to adapt their practice, create welcoming environments and ensure that people with Parkinson's feel included from the very first session. This partnership is about removing barriers, challenging perceptions, and making it clear that yoga is for everyone, whether someone is newly diagnosed or has been living with Parkinson's for many years.'
