Cake Push Pop ...The New Cupcake?

Tuesday 29 July, 2014

Cake Cetera, an online cake delivery company based in Glasgow, was founded after owner Pauline Quigley's mum died of cancer. She was shocked to find that flowers were banned from the wards and found most people brought in cake instead and so Cake-Cetera was born.

Pauline, a former clothing designer, has spent 3 years developing unique packaging which safely transports cake by courier throughout the UK.

Cake Cetera's range includes a range of cupcake bouquets, french macarons, giant doughnuts and their latest product...the cake push pop!

Pauline said "We are so excited to extend our deliveries throughout the UK. We have spent so long ensuring our packaging is perfect yet gorgeous on arrival.

"Our new product...the cake push pops have been flying out the door. The cake push pops contain layers of cake and buttercream topped with sprinkles and have been so popular for weddings and kids parties".

Hailed as the new cupcake but much more dainty as they are just pushed up. Pauline jokes "They are just so cute and tasty...wit's really difficult to to stop eating them ourselves"

Order any product online before 12 for next day delivery in the UK.
