

Care workers miss out on minimum wage

Monday 9 February, 2015

More than a tenth of UK care workers are being paid less than the national minimum wage of £6.50 an hour says a study by the think tank, The Resolution Foundation, released today (Monday 9 February).

According to the study, about 160,000 carers are losing an average of £815 a year. Many firms are wrongly not paying staff as they travel between clients, go on training or when 'on call'.

The care sector employs around 1.4million in the UK and the research by The Resolution Foundation said the total amount that care staff were missing out on was estimated to be around £130million a year. This could be even higher due to some non-compliance with minimum wage regulations.

Alzheimer's Society comment:

'It's disgraceful and unacceptable that dedicated care workers are being devalued and subjected to these pay conditions. It is vital that the government acts to end this scandalous practice, which denies workers from getting the minimum wage and tackles the low levels of pay across the sector.

'Two thirds of people with dementia currently live in the community and many will have to rely on help with day-to-day tasks. With an ageing population, more and more people are going to need care in their own homes and low salaries will deter people from an already demanding profession. We need to invest in care workers and ensure that they are given the support they need to provide the best care possible. The current social care system is broken and urgently needs to be fixed - otherwise we'll all be paying the price in the future.'

George McNamara

Head of Policy and Public Affairs

Alzheimer's Society

- Ends -

Related Sectors:

Charities & non-profits ::

Scan Me:

Company Contact:

—

Alzheimer's Society

E. press@alzheimers.org.uk

W. <https://alzheimers.org.uk/>

View Online

Newsroom: Visit our Newsroom for all the latest stories:

<https://www.alzheimers-society.pressat.co.uk>