

Citipeak Events Review why Millennials make the Industry's Top Sales People

Tuesday 11 August, 2015

Citipeak Events believe that Millennials possess some great qualities that make them top sales representatives. The firm explain their reasons why.

Millennials are the generation born between 1980 and 2000. They are one of the largest generations in history and they are about to move into their prime spending years. Millennials are poised to reshape the economy; their unique experiences will change the way consumers buy and sell, which will force companies to examine how they do business for decades to come. Citipeak Events believe that Millennials possess some great qualities that make them top sales people.

Citipeak Events reviewed a recent article on HubSpot Blogs \(12th May 2015\) and from this highlighted some reasons why Millennials make up the industry's top sales people. Citipeak Events picked out their 3 main reasons as:

- Millennials are digital natives. They adopt new technologies twice as fast as the rest of the world and they are comfortable using social platforms like Twitter, LinkedIn and Facebook to build relationships with prospects and establish a personal brand.
- Millennials take initiative. Over 50% of Millennials already have, or hope to, start their own business. This entrepreneurial spirit translates into finding new ways to sell, whether it's optimising their messaging for the best open rates or responding to emails with cheeky memes.
- Millennials take their approach to selling like a science. They test everything from subject line, to time of day, to length of email. This A/B testing is crucial and made possible because Millennials sales people embrace data and technology and innately use it to their advantage on the sales field.

Citipeak Events is an event marketing company based in East London.
