

CoinJar Enters UK Fintech Market

Monday 1 December, 2014

CoinJar, Australia's largest and longest running bitcoin company, today announced it has relocated its headquarters to the United Kingdom as part of a global expansion that will give bitcoin holders more freedom to buy, sell and use the digital currency.

CoinJar has officially incorporated as a UK company, CoinJar UK Ltd, and has taken up residence at Europe's largest financial technology accelerator, the high-profile Level 39 at Canary Wharf in London.

CoinJar CEO Asher Tan will move to London and begin hiring new talent in the UK, including top developers, to grow the European operation. CoinJar will continue to fully service its existing global customer base.

"We're excited to be part of the progressive digital currency scene in London, and we know we can play an important role in this market. Our mission here, as it has been in Australia, is to build great products that people love, that make digital finance simple and accessible to all," Tan said.

"The UK has a very sensible approach to the regulation of new technologies like bitcoin. There is recognition of its potential within government and regulatory bodies who are formulating policies to encourage FinTech businesses to situate themselves in the UK.

"This is how we believe it should be done. Digital currency is the new face of consumer finance."

Aside from catalysing CoinJar's growth, the UK relocation will mean CoinJar customers will no longer be subject to Australia's 10 per cent Goods and Services Tax (GST) when they buy bitcoin using the exchange, from 1 December. Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs in the UK exempts digital currency trading from value added tax (VAT)[^], so new and existing CoinJar customers will no longer be levied any additional taxes.

CoinJar's founders have had their eyes on a truly global product from day one, to capitalise on bitcoin's benefit as a borderless, global way of exchanging value.

"As we expand to the UK, we believe this will open up more opportunities for our existing customers to use a better global service," Tan said.

Since its founding in 2013, CoinJar has experienced exponential growth, acquiring more than 32,000 customers and processing more than $A50 million in transactions. It has also played a key role in fostering the rise of digital currencies in Australia.

"Even as we become a global company, our goal is to be on the ground as much as possible, wherever our customers are. Some things in technology don't scale — like the support of meetup groups, helping local communities and businesses," Tan said. "That is something we're passionate about and it will not change."

CoinJar was responsible for introducing Australia's first and only bitcoin EFTPOS card, CoinJar Swipe, allowing customers to spend their bitcoins in more places than ever. The company has plans to roll out Swipe globally, along with a new suite of digital tools that will help customers seamlessly manage and use bitcoin in their everyday lives, across multiple fiat currencies and digitally.

The move also coincides with the launch of CoinJar's new web platform, which seeks to be the easiest way to manage bitcoin. Android and iOS apps will be released early next year. New Terms of Service will be sent to CoinJar customers from 1 December.

European customers can pre-register their interest in CoinJar's UK products at www.coinjar.co.uk.
