Do not buy my current song! Alessandro Cipriano asks his fans for help!

Monday 8 August, 2016

International singer Alessandro has his current single, the lovely ballad One More Try (composed by Toby Chapman and Grant Black) temporarily withdrawn from sale due to the unexpected closure of the label he signed to. (It will be re-released again later details tba)

On discovering the closure by chance (as he was not notified by the label), it was requested that his song One More Try be removed from sale and streaming from all 161 outlets where he was told it was available at because despite the closure of the record label, they still had the song available for sale and streaming! There will be more news about this situation soon. Alessandro's contract with the label ends October 2016; he even paid for an admin fee, but the label broke the contract.

It was discovered that some sites were completely inappropriate, e.g., a used and new car selling site, etc., so One More Try had not really been placed there! It was also found that some appropriate sites had not received the song for sale or streaming at all, but information given to Alessandro stated it was there!

Alessandro now asks if his fans could please kindly help him by letting his management know if they find his song One More Try for sale or streaming anywhere online from this date.

Please DO NOT BUY IT or listen to it but let us know instead where it is together with a link to the page it can be accessed so we can have it removed. Please send what you find to us at c_read@ppmservices.org.uk (PPM (UK) Services – Alessandro's management).
