A Grant Cardone speech recently inspired Emora Ltd to review the topic of Domination vs. Competition. The firm believes that the subject is fascinating when working towards success and therefore held an exciting workshop for their contractors to discuss which the best practice for business success is.

Emora Ltd believes that, particularly in the sales industry, companies encourage competition and often set their representatives against each other in a contest to be the best, as well as to be the best business as a whole. However, Emora Ltd feels that competition can lead a person to become far too focused on what other people are doing as opposed to improving their own results.

The Nottingham-based sales and marketing firm have outlined why they believe that domination is what actually leads to success. Emora Ltd highlights how if a person is dominating in everything they do, there will be no need to compete with anyone else as they will already be performing to their best ability.

Emora Ltd expresses their belief that "It isn't vital to be the one dominating force within an industry but it is important to own everything that you do and achieve it to 100% of your abilities." Lauren Harrison, Managing Director of Emora Ltd, revealed that they encourage continuous learning and the development of new skills which allows each of their contractors to dominate in their own area.

"Sales is naturally a competitive industry, but we like to work together to support our contractors and ensure that they are continuously developing new skills and new advantages which allow them to dominate in the industry. This way they are less focused on what other people are doing and can concentrate on ensuring they have the best success possible for themselves," shared Lauren Harrison of Emora Ltd.

Emora Ltd is an outsourced sales and direct marketing firm based in Nottingham. The company specialises in a personalised form of marketing which allows them to offer highly unique marketing campaigns on behalf of their clients' brands.
