In one of the firm's most recent motivational meeting, Managing Director Lauren Harrison covered leadership and taking control in life. The business owner feels as though this topic is important for Emora Ltd.'s contractors to hear as all of these individuals are ambitious, aspiring business owners.

Ms. Harrison demonstrated the art of taking control in life by using the example of how life and leadership can be compared to a car ride. The business owner highlighted how the person in the driver's seat takes control of every move that the other people in the care take and shared how the passengers can still give direction but they never have the final say as to where the car goes. Ms. Harrison stated how in both life and leadership, a passenger will never be able to drive a team or control their own path.

In order to change this, Emora Ltd. believes that passengers must start to take control and make steps to put themselves in the driver's seat. The firm is confident that for any person to get to their goal they must be the leader and take control of their own actions, as well as that of others. A passenger will never be able to reach their final goal if they have another person dictating their path. Emora Ltd. is confident that this applies to both leadership and life as a whole.
