eComCharge has enhanced its white label payment gateway with BIN-routing, which will allow tenants to reduce the Internet acquiring cost

Wednesday 22 August, 2018

eComCharge, the developer of a white label payments gateway, has released BIN-routing, which is part of a large Smart-routing development project for the tenants of the platform.

Riga, Latvia, August 20, 2018. beGateway, a white label payment gateway developed by eComCharge, is now fully integrated with a number of acquiring banks from the UK, the EU countries, the USA and the CIS countries, bank-links for the Baltic States, e-wallets, pre-paid vouchers and other payment systems.

‘The cost of payment processing in Internet acquiring is largely determined by the type of payment transaction. Thanks to BIN-routing, the cost of Internet acquiring for the tenants of beGateway (a white label payment gateway) has decreased on average by 0.6%. It is because payment service providers are now able to send payment card transactions for processing to the desired acquiring banks for which the transactions are Intraregional, Domestic or even On-us,' Oksana Mikhailovskaya, CMO at eComCharge has explained.

'BIN-routing is just a small part of our large Smart-routing development project that the team is currently working on. For the tenants of our white label payment gateway, we are planning to provide Smart-routing depending on a number of transaction parameters and current characteristics of the bank, for example, round robin, by gateway weight, merchant country, volumes of payments, volumes of refunds, 3-D Secure existing, etc.' CMO at eComCharge shares their development plans.
