Monday 22 October, 2012

Employmentsurvey.net is an exclusive platform designed to analyse current employment market sentiments from across the globe

FindEmployment are pleased to introduce their new platform EmploymentSurvey.net, created to produce verifiable information and statistical analysis on employment market trends. The platform went live on 20th September 2012 and is already successfully producing results on a number of topical employment themes.

'EmploymentSurvey is a captivating and unique analysis and informational tool which directly connects the FindEmployment team with our customers and users, delivering us immediately accessible information on current market events and concerns', said Linda Cameron, Sales and Support Officer at FindEmployment. 'Traditionally, surveys are outsourced to third party companies and results are delivered much later, but this new platform allows us to keep our finger on the pulse of the continually changing trends in the global employment market', she added. 'Furthermore occasional prize draws will allow users the opportunity to win exceptional prizes for providing us with their valuable feedback'.

The development plan for EmploymentSurvey will increase its accessibility to mobile phone users allowing the surveys, which usually take approximately two minutes to complete, reach an even wider global audience. The results of all surveys will be produced in depth, in the Press and Media Section on FindEmployment.com. EmploymentSurvey will also collect information for the FindEmployment Career Outlook - quarterly and annual career review guides for future publication.
