Foxtons Continues Expansion With Five New Greater London Offices

Tuesday 12 January, 2016

London's leading Estate Agent Foxtons started the year on a high note by revealing its further expansion plans to open five new offices in London and Greater London. Opening between February and April this year, the new Loughton, Sutton, New Malden, Fulham Bishops Park and Maida Vale offices will bring the total number of strategically placed offices throughout London and Greater London to 63.

The new branches, run by the agency's dedicated sales and lettings teams, include experienced employees and local talent and will be welcoming the residents with fresh-from-the-bakery goodies and balloons over each launch weekend. To celebrate the openings and introduce Foxtons to the new areas, the offices will also run Foxtons revolutionary 0% commission promotion, offering to sell the local homeowners' properties for free.*

Andrew Weir, Managing Director, said: “Following recent growth in the outer London areas, we are thrilled to take the next significant step in our expansion strategy with the launch of these new offices, as well as adding a more local presence within some of our existing neighbourhoods. We look forward to bringing our unparalleled expertise and many years of experience to the local communities”.

The announcement follows agency's successful end to 2015, marked by winning The Sunday Times Lettings Agency Awards for Best Large Lettings Agency and the International Property Awards for Best Estate Agency in London.

The opening dates for each office will be announced on Foxtons.co.uk with an open invitation to visit the new offices and take advantage of the exciting promotional activities.
