Free King Charles III Coronation eCards announced

Friday 28 April, 2023

The coronation of King Charles iii on the 6th of May 2023, like his mother's coronation on the 2nd of June 1953 is a once in a generation event. According to Hope Spring eCards platform manager Seun Olonade. That is the reason she gave for her organisation's announcement on their blog that they are making eCards celebrating the king's coronation available free of charge.

Hope Spring eCards, which raises money exclusively for water poverty alleviation, though the same of various electronic greetings cards including birthdays, anniversaries and other occasions will make six special coronation cards available via the free ecards section of their platform. Both regular users of the site and casual visitors can send as many King Charles coronation cards as they want. All the need to do at the check out is to provide the code Long Live The King.

The special ecards made available for coronation is a mixture of greeting cards designed by Hope Spring eCards team in house, and some graphics made available by the UK government for people celebrating the king's coronation.

Hope Spring eCards expects hundreds of people to personalise and send their free King Charles III coronation eCards. They hope some of the new users the coronation ecard attracts will become regular users of their free charity eCards website.
