In today's market place, the customer is the most important aspect of a business and companies can have a tough time building brand loyalty. Sales and event marketing firm, GB Marketing Enterprise know how important it is to retain customers; this is because loyal customers are essential if a small business is looking to be a long-term success within their industry. GB Marketing Enterprise continue to state that personalising the customer experience will help dramatically when looking to retain loyal customers. For a customer to have a strong affinity with a brand, they need to feel like a brand speaks to them; if a brand makes their customers feel valued, loved and offers familiarity, the customer will come back, time and time again.

There are a few simple methods that brands can use to form stronger, more personal connections with their customers. These methods were reviewed in a recent article on smallbusiness.co.uk ('Business Loyalty: Building a Strong Customer Base', published on 5th April 2016) and GB Marketing Enterprise has reviewed these below.

Say Hello - This is such a simple technique, but one that automatically personalises the customer experience. Saying hello can be done face-to-face, via email or on a brand's website. It will make customers feel more at home, and give them a stronger reason to form a deep tie with the brand.

Social listening - Social media is an easy way of humanising a brand. Replies from a business will make a customer feel like they are being listened to and that they are there for them when they need it.

Loyalty - For small businesses, customers are a number one priority, so adding a personalised touch will give a small business a competitive advantage over larger companies. Customers who receive a positive buying experience are likely to spread the word, meaning the customer base will grow naturally.
