

Glasgow Is the Gambling Capital of Europe

Thursday 30 July, 2015

The crew of Roulette.org.uk has conducted a survey on 2,400 Europeans who legally gamble online within their home country and found out significant results. They in fact asked 200 individuals from the 12 European nations including Poland, Denmark, Portugal, Italy, Netherlands, Spain, Finland, Norway, Sweden, Germany, Scotland and England.

The findings include: 1 out of 5 Scottish males are playing Roulette online along with fixed odd terminals, 1 out of 4 Brits are participating in gambling activities online, 1 out of 5 Brits are now gambling using their mobile devices, Scots are playing Roulette more than other European nations for real money, and 75% of Brits are participating in gambling activities every year.

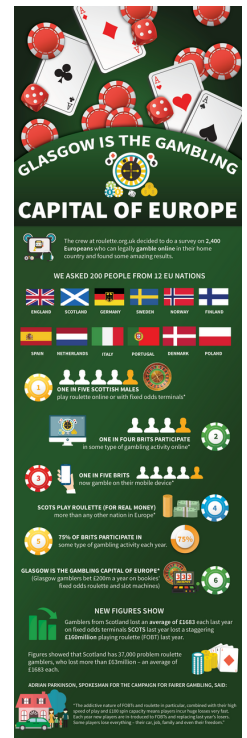

The ultimate finding is that Glasgow is actually the gambling capital of Europe

"The addictive nature of FOBTs and roulette in particular, combined with their high speed of play and £100 spin capacity means players incur huge losses very fast. Each year, new players are introduced to FOBTs and replacing last year's losers. Some players lose everything including car, job, family and even their freedom," says Adrian Parkinson, Fairer Gambling Campaign Spokesman.

With the easiness in playing roulette, more and more gamblers are playing each year. Brits are enticed with lush payouts offered by this game not to mention that they are indeed well entertained when playing roulette online or through their mobile devices.
