

HazardCo launches in the UK, bringing a simple, guided Health & Safety system to Builders

Thursday 10 October, 2024

October 2024 – London, UK: HazardCo, a leading digital health and safety system, is poised to help UK builders streamline their health and safety processes. Already trusted by over 10,000 businesses and 150,000 users, HazardCo provides straightforward guidance designed to simplify health and safety for builders of all sizes.

UK-specific solution

With years of experience and proven success across New Zealand and Australia, HazardCo is excited to bring its expertise to the UK. The system launching in the UK has been specially tailored by local health and safety experts to meet the needs of British builders. Backed by a dedicated local team, HazardCo is ready to provide local support and ensure members get the most from the system.

“At HazardCo, our goal is to help builders focus on what matters – ensuring everyone goes home safely at the end of the day,” said Iain Dixon, CEO at HazardCo. “We’ve seen first-hand how a simple, guided system can make all the difference, and we’re excited to bring this approach to the UK.”

Simple, guided health and safety system

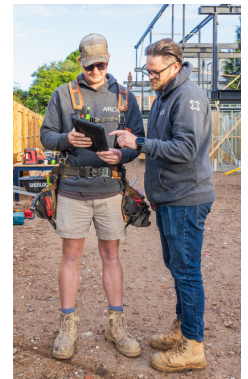

The HazardCo system provides builders with a digital system to confidently manage on-site safety. It includes access to the HazardCo Hub, where safety documents like site-specific Construction Phase Plans can be generated in minutes. Builders also receive a Hazard Board for their site, featuring a QR code that guides workers through a digital induction upon entry. With the on-site app, completing important safety documents such as RAMS and Risk Assessments is quick and easy, keeping safety management effortless and efficient.

A timely solution for UK builders

The expansion comes at a crucial time as the Building Safety Act is reshaping the construction industry. The Act places greater responsibility on builders and developers to construct and maintain buildings to higher safety standards. With a growing focus on safety and quality, builders are now paying closer attention to their health and safety obligations—and HazardCo is here to guide them. The UK construction industry is increasingly adopting digital tools to streamline project management, both on-site and in the office. As more builders transition to software solutions for managing their operations, HazardCo’s entry into the UK market comes at the perfect time.

“We’re excited to be working with builders across the UK, helping them simplify their health and safety processes. We understand the unique challenges builders face and are here to take the guesswork out of health and safety. Our system is designed to make the entire process straightforward and ensure that builders stay compliant and protect their teams,” said Sam Eden, Business Development Manager.
