

How to make the most of Britain's best new car deals

Monday 28 July, 2014

- What Car? reveals how to pay as little as possible for your new car
- Car buyers are encouraged to 'haggle with confidence'

What Car?, Britain's biggest car-buying brand, helps buyers get the new car they want at the best price possible. They explain the various buying options out there, and provide the know-how needed to haggle with confidence.

The What Car? Target Price is the most a buyer should expect to pay for a vehicle, based on exhaustive research by the What Car? mystery shoppers. Decent discounts are available on even the most popular new cars; you can save more than 12% on the Ford Fiesta 1.0T Ecoboost, and around 6% on the latest Audi A3 Saloon 2.0 TDI Sport.

Haggle with confidence using What Car?'s top tips

- Be prepared. Research your chosen car model, pricing and any extra options you want before visiting the dealer
- Compare the list price with the What Car? Target Price; also check available broker deals. This will provide you with the confidence to haggle, and to remain firm on the price you want to pay
- Research the best possible finance deals that are offered by manufacturers and third parties
- Time your dealer visit right; sales targets are usually totted up at the end of the month
- If there is a part-exchange vehicle involved, negotiate its price separately to avoid losing out
- Beware of special offers. Ask exactly what is involved and calculate whether it is actually saving you money in the long run.

What Car?'s consumer editor Alex Newby said: 'Many of us don't feel all that comfortable about haggling, but once you have researched the best available price for your new car – using the What Car? Target Price or broker prices – you should feel perfectly confident about asking the same from your dealer. If they won't play ball, buy from somewhere that will.'

'You can take your car to any franchised dealer for warranty work; you're not even tied to a franchised dealer for servicing, so it makes no difference as to where the car comes from.'

'There are some fantastic discounts available, even on the most popular new cars on sale right now, but if you want them from a dealer, you'll still need to adopt the right approach to get the price you want. Alternatively, you can let a broker do the work for you.'
