"I loved it," raved editor John Fox after taking the course at The Novelry.

The Novelry takes writers through a guided daily process to write a first draft of a novel, then through rounds of development overseen by Louise Dean and other writer members including bestselling authors before presenting finished manuscripts to The Novelry's preferred literary agency partners.

"We're the only online writing school to see the point of having published writers as part of a working community." Says Louise Dean. Louise gives all her writers one-to-one live coaching and direction online worldwide.

The leading literary agents working with The Novelry agree to super fast track reading work from its graduates in recognition of the high standard of work. Typically they respond positively within days.

"Last week I made one of those calls you love to make." Says Louise. "The literary agent my writer had at the top of her wish list said - yes. My writer was thrilled. She started with us last year and took all three of our courses and went through our editing process. I pitched on her behalf, as I do for my graduates and we got the result. This is very much our mission at The Novelry. We get writers published. With plenty of hard work en route and quite a few laughs. It's all about the joy."

The Novelry enjoys cult status with members who recently gathered for the all-inclusive luxurious writers' retreat at a Dorset manor house.

"The old days of writing on your own in a garret in your cardigan and slippers wondering if the work's any good are gone. Getting published is not a solo act, " says Louise.
