Imperyo’s Guide to a Stress-Free Vacation for Entrepreneurs

Monday 15 June, 2015

Since returning from an R&R trip to Portugal, Imperyo have been highlighting how important it is for entrepreneurs to step away from business now and then in order to refresh and refocus. The firm have offered entrepreneurs an insightful guide on how to enjoy a stress-free holiday.

Despite being a relatively new firm, sales and event marketing company Imperyo have been inundated by companies looking to invest in their services. This demand has led to an extremely positive first quarter for the firm and has helped them achieve a highly favourable reputation among industry leaders. Coming from such a busy period of growth and development, Imperyo were thrilled to take an opportunity to travel to Portugal recently for a rest and relaxation trip on which they were able to strengthen their internal relationships and put the demands of business aside.

The R&R trip saw managing director Claristelle Labrador travel to the Algarve with her administration team for three and a half days. Whilst part of the trip was dedicated to networking with other professionals and discussing business ideas the trip was an informal affair with the majority of the weekend spent taking time away from business in order for the attendees to refresh and refocus their minds.

Imperyo believe that for new entrepreneurs and business owners, taking time to regroup and relax is key to business success. It can be tempting for new business owners to commit all of their time to their business ventures, believing that this will give them the competitive edge however, Imperyo believe the reality is quite the opposite. Not taking time away will induce greater amounts of stress and cause a business owner to feel overwhelmed. When feeling overwhelmed business owners are far more likely to make poor decisions which could greatly impact the success of their business. Although it may initially be difficult for entrepreneurs and new business owners to leave their business behind and delegate to others, Imperyo believe this to be a necessary step both for their own health and well-being and for that of their business.

To help entrepreneurs and business owners understand that it's okay to take a break once in a while, Imperyo have offered their guide on how to reduce worry whilst away from the office and enjoy a stress free vacation.

Scheduling

The easiest way for an entrepreneur to reduce stress and worry is to plan well in advance. This will ensure that any major tasks are completed well beforehand and provide them with adequate time to delegate the remaining tasks to the best people. Scheduling their time whilst away is also important as it allows entrepreneurs to make the most of every minute they have and make thoughtful choices on how they would like to spend their time. Making time to get in the correct mind set and paying a little extra for flights at reasonable times can also help entrepreneurs fully appreciate their vacation time and will help them to return to work feeling more refreshed.

Plan the Return

Having a re-entry plan is important when taking time away from work, as returning last minute and rushed can leave the effects of a holiday redundant. Entrepreneurs should aim to arrive home a day or two early so that they can organise the week ahead and get a good night's sleep.
