Platinum selling John Newman and Mercury Prize nominee Jessie Ware confirmed as headliners for newly expanded two-day No Tomorrow Festival

James Bay, Bondax and more cutting edge names amongst first acts confirmed for the festival's second year

John Newman and Jessie Ware, two of the most successful crossover acts to break through in recent years, are now confirmed as headliners for No Tomorrow Festival, 6th and 7th June, Wollaton Park, Nottingham. Further acts including the BRITS 2015 Critics' Choice Award winner James Bay will feature in a carefully curated programme of artists across several stages over two days. With tickets now on sale via notomorrowfestival.com, it's time to party like there's No Tomorrow.

No Tomorrow Festival will be crowned by a set from John Newman, a Yorkshireman channeling Northern soul into modern pop. Newman's hits include the number one single 'Love Me Again' and guest spots on Rudimental's 'Feel The Love' and Calvin Harris' 'Blame', both of which also topped the UK Singles Chart. This performance will be the first time Newman has headlined a UK festival's main stage. Also confirmed to headline is Jessie Ware, queen of an updated take on R&B teetering on the edge of the electronic. As well as her own Mercury Prize nominated material, Ware has appeared as a guest vocalist on tracks by the likes of Disclosure and SBKTRT. This announcement follows two sold out shows for Jessie Ware at Brixton Academy.

Elsewhere the festival's attention turns to some of the most current and in-demand names attracting critical acclaim. Singer-songwriter James Bay features in the highest profile up-and-coming lists of the year including BBC Sound Of 2015 poll. Bay went on to win the BRITS Critics' Choice award following in the footsteps of Adele and last year's No Tomorrow headliner Sam Smith. DJ and house music producer Philip George brings homegrown talent to the festival. The Nottingham-based 21 year old recently made a big first impression by reaching number two in the UK Singles chart with his debut 'Wish You Were Mine'.

Across No Tomorrow's several stages the festival also boasts many more performances and a number of the finest international DJ talents. Bondax, DJ EZ, and Eton Messy will be delivering epic DJ set across the dance music spectrum. Also expect strong live performances from the enigmatic Bristol duo Blonde with full band, Grammy-nominated MNEK and Bondax guest vocalist KStewart, appearing in her own right with solo material.

No Tomorrow celebrates the start of the summer season with a party menagerie of weekend wildlife. Set against the backdrop of Wollaton Hall which was used as Wayne Manor in the recent Batman movies, the once peaceful and idyllic setting of Nottingham's deer park descends into a heady mix of cutting edge artists and carefully curated DJ sets. Combining top-line music with immersive art installations and workshops, full-on games and crafted food and drink, it's time to party like there's No Tomorrow.

Tickets are available now from notomorrowfestival.com or by calling 0844 871 8819.
