Join Aldermore's Live Panel Chat For The Budget 2014

Tuesday 18 March, 2014

With the policies in tomorrow's Budget set to hold profound influence over the future of Britain's homebuyers, savers and SMEs, Aldermore is inviting individuals from each group to share their reactions through a live Twitter panel chat.

As a Bank committed to understanding the challenges faced by the UK's consumers and businesses, Aldermore recognises the significant effect the Budget can have in shaping each group's finances.

Announcements from the 2013 Budget, including Help to Buy and the Funding for Lending Scheme, have allowed the economy to turn a corner as we enter 2014 and improved the outlook for both homebuyers and SMEs.

This year's Budget hopes to build on that momentum and address the hurdles that remain, and Aldermore wants to hear each group reflect directly on how the government's plans meet their needs.

Aldermore is seeking individuals who represent the interests of homebuyers, small businesses and savers to take part in a live Twitter panel next Wednesday, responding to George Osborne's announcements, using the #BudgetPanel hashtag.

For the opportunity to have your say, get in touch with Aldermore on Twitter.
