JP Morgan volunteers make a difference at Ardroy Outdoor Education Centre

Thursday 12 November, 2026

On 4th November, Friends of Loch Lomond and The Trossachs welcomed 19 volunteers from JP Morgan to Ardroy Outdoor Education Centre for another successful Make a Difference Day, bringing together corporate volunteers and charity representatives to support the upkeep and improvement of this important local facility.

Based at Lochgoilhead on the shores of Loch Goil, Ardroy Outdoor Education Centre has been providing outdoor learning experiences since 1969, helping young people develop confidence, resilience and valuable life skills through a range of outdoor activities and residential experiences.

The volunteers joined forces with Ardroy's maintenance team to undertake a variety of practical tasks around the centre. These included creosoting outdoor furniture, digging holes and installing fence posts, painting interior educational spaces and carrying out repairs to windows in the old house.

The enthusiastic team worked hard throughout the day, making a valuable contribution to the ongoing maintenance of the centre and helping ensure its facilities remain in good condition for the many groups and young people who visit each year.

The day also included a Jacob's Ladder team-building challenge, giving the volunteers an opportunity to experience one of Ardroy's outdoor activities while putting their communication, cooperation and teamwork skills to the test.

Friends of Loch Lomond and the Trossachs Chairman, John Urquhart commented:
"The Ardroy volunteering day was another fantastic success for our Make a Difference Day programme. We were delighted to welcome 19 volunteers from JP Morgan, whose enthusiasm and willingness to roll up their sleeves and get involved made a real difference. Our thanks go to everyone from JP Morgan who gave up their time to support the day, as well as the team at Ardroy for welcoming us and helping coordinate such a successful event."

The charity's Make a Difference Day programme continues to provide opportunities for individuals, businesses and community groups to get involved in practical conservation, heritage and environmental improvement projects throughout Loch Lomond and The
