Klugman CM Capital Markets (www.klugman-cm.com) to Open New York Offices

Monday 12 May, 2014

Klugman CM Capital Markets (www.klugman-cm.com) is about to open an office in New York. David Chung Li, Tony Brow and Mark Lee join Klugman CM after ten years working together in the Southeast Asia commodities and futures markets.

They will be in charge of dealing with US physical and financial agricultural commodities.

“We are very delighted to welcome Mark, David and Tony to Klugman CM”, said Robert C. Martins, the president of Klugman CM. “All three are highly experienced and accomplished in agricultural markets and they will be a valuable addition to Klugman CM.”

Agricultural commodities are traded on a physical delivery basis, meaning any contract traded can result in physical delivery to a grain silo in US. More recently, Klugman CM started to trade for its clients cash-traded corn contracts, for which physical delivery is not required. These contracts are pure financial instruments which makes them appealing to a broader range of market participants.
“We want to consolidate and build on what we already have,” says Chung. “That means encouraging new market participants, and continuing to educate people in the benefits and advantages of commodity derivatives.”
