Leading software development company OpenXcell Technolabs enters UK & EU Market as a part of its strategic development

Monday 28 July, 2014

One of the leading software development company, Openxcell Technolabs has amplified its global reach by opening a new branch office in London, United Kingdom.

For years, OpenXcell has served its global clients vigorously with high client satisfaction and retention. With a branch office London now, it is able to increase its efficiency and responsiveness in client servicing, support and assistance. The team in London will focus on providing the range of software development services including mobile app, games, web, and eCommerce development across the UK and Europe.

As a part of its strategic development, the new office in London symbolizes further growth of the company's network in order to serve a growing customer base. OpenXcell will keep working in Onshore-offshore model with management team in London and development team in India, giving its customers significant cost benefits in their projects.

“OpenXcell is growing rapidly.” said Jayneel Patel, CEO of OpenXcell. “We are proud to introduce our new branch office in London. Now, we can serve our clients more closely, and deal with their needs more effectively”.

He added,”We are really excited about our London office as it is an outcome of years of struggle, planning and most importantly, our growing number of global clients. In US, OpenXcell is considered as a leader of web, games and mobile app development and now we are expecting the same in the UK and Europe”.

Apart from client satisfaction, OpenXcell is well-known for its strategy to adopt newer technologies. They have worked on generating great resource pool to educate their customer regarding use of new technology like Google glass and Android Wear. In upcoming years, OpenXcell plans to boost its growth by adopting newer and more efficient technological tools to meet client needs and remain cost effective at the same time. It's a strategy that OpenXcell is following since its inception which is a crucial part of its rapid growth.

OpenXcell Technolabs is a reliable and reputed company for mobile, game and web app development. With its headquarters located in US and development centre located in India, the new branch in London will further strengthen its might.
