Lewtress Rosehip Supplements for Arthritis

Rosehips have long been known for their effectiveness at alleviating joint pain caused by osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis and for helping to improve and support joint health.

The most common form of arthritis is osteoarthritis. This is a condition where the cartilage tissues in your joints lose the ability to bend and stretch in contrast to healthy cartilage, which forms a cushion to protect each bone from each other.

Osteoarthritis develops when this cartilage begins to break down, forming debris within the joints, which can then cause friction resulting in inflammation, pain, stiffness, and loss of motion.

Other factors that can lead to osteoarthritis are too many acidic forming foods in the diet, which can also lead to gout.

Rheumatoid arthritis occurs when the lining of the joints become inflamed causing fluid build-up stiffness and swelling.

Rosehip extracts can discourage the build-up of white blood cells accumulating in large amounts within the joints, thus making sure that joint inflammation, stiffness and pain is minimal and thereby helping to make arthritis a more manageable condition.

Lewtress Rosehip contains a particular galactolipid present in highly concentrated pure extracts of Rosa Canina. Rosa Canina, commonly known as the dog rose, is a variable climbing, wild rose species native to Europe, northwest Africa, and western Asia.

This galactolipid has a specific natural action, which can breakdown, dissolve and eliminate the debris and nodules which form within osteoarthritic joints. In so doing it reduces inflammation and eventual erosion of cartilage and so alleviates the associated pain and restricted movement.

This natural plant supplement can help reduce the need for traditional over the counter painkillers making it a unique benefit to overall health.
