

Meet Micom: Powering the Future of Business Messaging

Wednesday 9 July, 2025

COVENTRY, 9th July 2025 — Today, iMail Comms announces its rebrand to Micom - short for Multi-channel Intelligent Communications - marking the next phase in its evolution as a tech-first platform transforming how businesses deliver customer communications across all channels.

Micom is designed for organisations that need to communicate smarter. It combines automation, speed and scale across channels from a single, intelligent platform. Whether it's a service update, regulatory notice or marketing campaign, Micom ensures messages land through the right channel at the right time, automatically triggering print only when digital delivery fails.

"This isn't a new direction, it's a name that finally fits the tech we've already been delivering," said Andy Barber, CEO of Micom. "Micom unifies what used to be separate systems into one intelligent multi-channel communications platform, giving Marketing and Operations teams control, speed and consistency."

From Fragmented to Unified

One Platform

Micom brings together email, SMS, and triggered print into a single, intelligent command centre, eliminating the need for multiple vendors, clunky integrations, and siloed workflows. Everything is managed in one place, with real-time visibility and control.

Proven in Practice

We're already powering millions of messages for leading brands in healthcare, retail, utilities, and financial services. We're simplifying regulatory communications, streamlining operations, and cutting the time to send from days to seconds.

Ready for What's Next

Micom's automation engine is already live, with smart triggers, scheduling, and channel routing. Next up: AI-driven personalisation and deeper workflow integration, so businesses can move faster, communicate smarter, and stay ahead.

Why Micom

Micom is short for Multi-channel Intelligent Communications—a name that captures exactly what we do and how we think.

It's about clarity in complexity, intelligence over noise, and giving businesses one place to deliver the messages that matter—wherever and however they need to land.

Our new icon brings this to life:

A lightning bolt for speed, agility and the power to cut through.

A digital pixel for accuracy, precision and the modern, tech-driven edge.

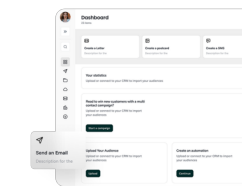

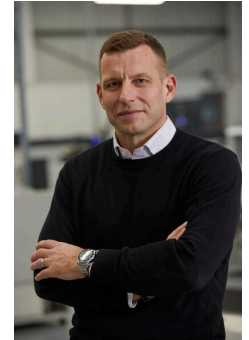

Together, they form a bold "M" that stands for momentum, messaging and making it happen—faster, smarter, sharper.

Micom isn't just a name—it's a statement: this is how customer communication gets done now.
