Media:

Top UK brands outsource MJ Experia Marketing sales and marketing services in order to generate higher quality customer leads and improved brand awareness.

With rapid business growth, expansion within the company leads to the consumption of more resources and more time, thus potentially meaning more finances. However, outsourcing work to sales and marketing firms like MJ Experia Marketing Ltd can ensure services are not damaged in quality. By outsourcing selective business areas, it offers workers more time to focus on maintaining and improving other key areas in the company.

MJ Experia Marketing have seen a demand for their outsourcing services increase month on month since their establishment. Based in the heart of Birmingham's city centre, the firm has helped accelerate sales, boost revenue and build brand exposure within the sales and marketing sector. With a strong focus on face-to-face promotion and customer acquisition, MJ Experia Marketing has seen these methods improve customer loyalty by 21%. Managing director Matt Wassall at MJ Experia Marketing explains how they offer a cost-effective service that can benefit companies who have little direction when it comes to sales and marketing: "We offer a very specialised service. Many UK brands don't have the time or finances to invest in the training required to specialise in direct forms of sales and marketing, therefore we are a very cost-effective solution."

Outsourcing sales and marketing in particular can have huge benefits that will add value to any business. These range from reducing resources and overhead costs to flexibility and continuity within the workplace. By outsourcing work to a company that has more experience and training within marketing, it offers further opportunities such as visualising different perspectives when launching new products or developing new marketing strategies.
