Talk to someone new

MJ Experia Marketing says that even shy people can seek out one-to-one conversations or meetings with new people or participate in an online event around a new topic.

Seek out a different perspective

Find someone who thinks differently and has different opinions and actively push that difference. This can be done by searching for a provocative topic in a LinkedIn group and reaching out to a contributor with a different idea. Or, find a colleague who always challenges opinions and partner with them on a new project.

Discover a topic outside the industry

Being open to attending other industry events can be beneficial. Without even realising it, new ideas will form that have been used in another industry but are relevant and can help develop the business.

Do what doesn't come naturally

Try out different personality traits. It may be tough but it can be very rewarding and will help to develop a greater appreciation for those in the team who do those things well.

Be open

Be open to new ideas and new people that you can learn things from. Be open to what they ask and ask them tough questions in response, whilst remaining open to their answers even if their opinions are the complete opposite. .
