Music superstars combine to release album in aid of British Tinnitus Association – I Am The One In Ten

26 February 2016 - Available from iTunes and all good digital stores from 4 March, "I Am The One In Ten" is a compilation album produced by the British Tinnitus Association under the guidance of

DJ, Producer and BTA Ambassador Eddy Temple Morris. All eighteen tracks on the album feature cuts and remixes from number one artists including Black Eyed Peas and Embrace, a previously unreleased Coldplay remix, personally approved for this album by Chris Martin, as well as tracks from cult club DJs. Every track on the album has been donated by an artist who lives with tinnitus and each person involved in the stages of the project is affected by the condition. The album's title refers to the number of people in the UK living with tinnitus. An accompanying promotional video can be viewed at Musician Hiatus (Cyrus Shahrada) said: "Tinnitus affects me every hour of every day, and not a day goes by where I don't think about giving up making music because of it. I've no doubt future generations will look back in disbelief at the punishment early ravers and rockers inflicted on their hearing, yet still I meet kids in clubs who laugh at the idea of wearing earplugs. Some of them, like me, will find out the hard way, but the work of the BTA will help others avoid this terrible condition. It's an honour to be a part of this album, and to do my small part in spreading this urgent message."

London Elektriccity (Tony Colman) adds: "Tinnitus is a major issue that affects millions of people and, like many conditions, it's not talked about. I suffer from it, but I've learned to love it - I figured there was no choice - but some are not so lucky, and it can even drive people to suicide. This release is to focus awareness on tinnitus and I'm very happy to be able to contribute in some small way with a song I wrote specifically about my feelings about tinnitus."

BTA Ambassador Eddy Temple-Morris said: "We've had some incredible support from some of the biggest artists in the world, right through to some of underground electronic dance music's leading lights, plus writers, pluggers, managers, DJs from radio and clubs, studios and an army of helpers, all of whom have tinnitus."

He adds: "Music and tinnitus have been unhappy bedfellows ever since the first time music was amplified, and the number of people suffering will increase and keep on increasing, whilst our ears get battered more and more by mp3 players, mobile phones, and speakers in our daily lives. Never has there been a need for more research, so we can better understand the condition and therefore get closer to finding a cure. This is an amazing way raise awareness and funds for the BTA and we're hugely grateful to everyone involved."

One in ten people have from tinnitus, the sensation of hearing a noise which has no external sound. This can be a buzzing, ringing, whistling or a more complex sound. The British Tinnitus Association is the leading charity in offering support to people with tinnitus. It strives to raise awareness of the condition, provides information to those with tinnitus, and offers guidance on prevention. It receives no government funding for its work. Proceeds raised by "I Am The One In Ten" will go to the British Tinnitus Association in order to help the association continue its vital work.

Editors Notes

The British Tinnitus Association (BTA) is an independent charity which supports thousands of people who experience tinnitus and advises medical professionals from across the world.

The BTA is the primary source of support and information for people with tinnitus in the UK, facilitating an improved quality of life.

They aim to encourage prevention through its educational programme and to seek effective treatment for tinnitus through a medical research programme.

The support the BTA offers to 335,000 people per year who are affected by tinnitus is reliant upon the generous donations of their supporters and fundraisers. They receive no government support and need to raise £600,000 each year to continue their UK wide support. Donations can be made via www.justgiving.com/BTA

Not an illness or disease, tinnitus is a term that describes the sensation of hearing a noise in the absence of an external sound. The noise can have virtually any quality. Ringing, whistling, and buzzing are common, but more complex sounds may also be reported. Troublesome tinnitus can be very distressing for the affected individual, and issues may arise with sleep, concentration and mood. However, in many cases, subtle changes in people's environment can address these issues, and improve quality of life.

The experienced team at the BTA understands the impact that tinnitus can have on the lives of those who experience tinnitus and those who live with them, so seeks to provide the most appropriate and expert advice and information free of charge – via a confidential freephone helpline on 0800 018 0527 and online at www.tinnitus.org.uk. The BTA can also post printed and audio information and advice.
