London, 7th November 2019

Netstar IT Support, one of London's leading IT Support companies, has achieved the internationally recognised information security management ISO 27001:2013 certification for the sixth successive year.

What this means for our clients

This ISO 27001:2013 Information Security Management certification sets Netstar apart from most other IT Support companies and Managed Service Providers in London and means you can be confident that your sensitive business data is completely safe.

Mit Patel, Netstar MD comments, "Safeguarding our customers' confidential information is of paramount importance to us. We are delighted to have been re awarded the ISO 27001:2013 certification for the sixth year running. This achievement recognises our ongoing commitment to the strict information security management protocols we have in place."

Why it is vital that your IT Support partner is ISO 27001 certified

The implications of a data breach can be severe – both in financial and reputational terms. So, when selecting an IT Support Partner, one of the key concerns for companies is where their data will be held and having the certainty that it is secure. Therefore, it is essential that your IT Support partner or Managed Service Provider is ISO 27001 certified.

ISO 27001 standards help organisations keep information assets secure. By obtaining this certification Netstar has proven its ability to manage the security of sensitive data such as financial information, intellectual property, employee information and third party information, including that of its clients.

ISO 27001 certified IT Support companies have been independently audited to ensure they have robust systems and processes in place to control access to networks, systems, workstations, servers and data.
