Tuesday 5 March, 2024

Martha's Vineyard, March 5, 2024 – Are you an aspiring artist desperate to be creative, yet feeling smothered by all of life's demands? If so, look no further than The Need-Not Artist by Kasha Ritter - a practical guide that transforms obstacles into opportunities and inspires you to embrace the artist you've always dreamed of becoming.

In this insightful journey, Kasha Ritter, a full-time mother of three with a non-stop household, shares her personal story of pursuing her artistic passion amid the chaos of daily life. With nine motivating chapters, she dismantles common excuses, providing step-by-step guidance on overcoming obstacles such as housework or daily demands, children, and perceived lack of talent.

"The idea for The Need-Not Artist came to life when I was reading an old journal," Ritter says. "I had written, 'I need.....I really need.....I don't have.....' in regards to time, space, money, art supplies, skill and understanding. It became obvious to me that the things I thought I needed, I actually needed-not. I wrote this book to help others because I care deeply for their well-being. In the past, people would talk to me about their desire to be artistic and their concerns mirrored mine. I could sense a genuine longing in them which I understood first-hand. I wrote this book as a way to give back and pay it forward. So many people helped me with kind support, encouragement and believing in me when I could not."

Discover how to carve out creative time for your art and build upon your innate talent. Kasha's wisdom extends beyond creative inspiration, offering coaching on intuition, confidence, and self-investment. Learn to recognize your supporters, cultivate your unique style, and tap into the thriving business side of art without succumbing to the "starving artist" stereotype.

In The Need-Not Artist, you'll find:

- Practical advice on time management, marketing, and running your art like a successful business.
