NEW BULAMBULI BOUTIQUE LAUNCHES, OPENING UP UGANDAN BLING TO THE WORLD

- Parody rap video, Money Makes Money, convinced the world that Bulambuli in eastern Uganda was worth investing in
- Video showed villagers 'faking it until they make it' using DIY jewellery, cars and even a helicopter to raise funds to support local businesses
- 'Authentic' gold watch, necklaces, bracelets and champagne flutes that featured in the video now on sale at the Bulambuli Boutique
- Shop the entire range at <https://www.bulambuli.com> with all profits supporting the £30,000 crowdfunding goal

People are being given the opportunity to own some 'authentic' Bulambuli bling and support a Ugandan community in need.

The Bulambuli Boutique, launched by the villagers, will raise funds to create five new local businesses, provide support to existing establishments and provide an additional 250 entrepreneurs with financial education and investment.

It follows the release of parody rap and music video Money Makes Money, which saw the Bulambuli community in eastern Uganda 'faking it until they make it' to try and convince the world they were worth investing in.

The tongue-in-cheek video – spearheaded by the creative team at Wakaliwood, Uganda's best known film studio – saw community members create jewellery, flashy cars and even a helicopter out of recycled materials like straws, plastic bottles and cardboard.

Now, people are being given the chance to purchase some of these 100% 'authentic', high-end items for themselves, with all profits supporting the £30,000 crowdfunding goal. Designed in Uganda by local talent and available exclusively at <https://www.bulambuli.com> pieces include:

The 'Elgon' bracelet - £50

Perfect for those who love a statement piece, this chunky golden bracelet takes its name from beautiful Mount Elgon, Uganda. Pair with a power suit for a day-to-night look that won't let you down.

The Bulambuli Boutique was launched in partnership with Communities for Development, a charity dedicated to empowering Ugandan communities to become self sufficient through saving groups, training and financial support. By giving community members the ability to leverage their own skills, Communities for Development aims to give individuals the ability to become financially self-sufficient.

Pilar Tejon from Communities for Development said:

"This is an opportunity for people around the world to show their support for the creativity and entrepreneurial spirit of a community that needs a leg up. The Bulambuli Boutique allows people to invest in a timeless piece at the heart of a creative initiative and help a community in need get even closer to their fundraising goal."

Curro Piqueras from DUDE said:

"Think about this: you surely need more swag and entrepreneurs of Bulambuli need donations. That's why we created the Bulambuli Boutique, an online store with the Money Makes Money music video items, designed in Bulambuli. Buy yourself some extra coolness, while helping local entrepreneurs to build income generating activities. Definitely a win win situation."

The Bulambuli Boutique was created by the creative agency DUDE and the PR agency Third City.
