New Travel Company on the Block: travioor Announces Launch of Beta Website With New Video

Friday 22 January, 2016

Travioor (www.travioor.com) understands that travellers today are forced to visit a huge array of websites to organise their trips. Different websites are used to get inspiration, research and book each element of a trip which can be time-intensive and frustrating. travioor looks to simplify this process by bringing all these elements together in one place.

Catering to solo and group travellers alike, travioor's beta website works in partnership with Skyscanner to offer a visually engaging travel portal where you can get inspiration for your trip and find your flights all on one website. When it comes to group travel, travioor uses a special algorithm to provide members from different origin cities with destination inspiration to suit the group as a whole.

Ultimately, travioor seeks to simplifying the entire process of trip planning with new features constantly being developed. Watch this space and you'll see travioor become the one-stop destination for every aspect of the trip planning process, from inspiration and research all the way through to group decision-making and booking.

The promotional video, produced from the company's headquarters in London, visually explains travioor's unique concept. Take a look!

We've got exciting new features coming very soon. Email iseult.larkin@travioor.com with the subject line "Newsletter" and we'll keep you posted!
