

New UK based website changing our world

Friday 19 August, 2016

A new website developed in the UK, destined to change the world as we know it goes live worldwide this week and is a potential lifeline for the vulnerable people as well as a business opportunity for the masses, connecting people who need a job done with those wanting to make some cash while helping out others whatever their skill set may be.

Antbodz allows individuals to post jobs when they want something brought to them quickly from bringing a bottle of wine, baby milk or medicines to DIY materials. If you need something large brought in a van, the list of potential items is endless.

The other side to the site allows users to post jobs for something they want done from changing a lightbulb or maybe or mowing your lawn to building you a house. Again the list is endless and covers any individual, trade or profession

People at home without means or ability to get out or perform any task in the home will now have the means to get their needs met quickly.

People seeking casual work will have the means to easily find and take on jobs. Suppliers or 'worker ants' pay a small fee to the site for jobs they take on any customers can review the service afterwards.

Such a simple concept could change the lives of all of us as there will come a time when each and every one of us will need Antbodz.
