

New UK homebrew magazine helps you craft your own perfect pint

Wednesday 14 October, 2020

The UK homebrew scene is growing rapidly, particularly following lockdown this year. An accessible pastime, which can produce brilliant beers at the fraction of the price of commercial brews, homebrewing has potential for turning tentative beginners into master craft brewers. But the journey isn't always easy! That said, part of the joy of homebrewing comes from the challenge of nailing the perfect pint. Which is where MASHED! Magazine comes in.

A must-have for the discerning beer lover, MASHED! Magazine is an inspiring and informative resource for both novice and advanced homebrewers, crammed with articles to help and inspire their homebrewing. From interviews with the pros, to homebrew recipes and tech talk.

Founded last year by hop farmer and homebrewer, Gareth Davies, MASHED! Magazine is published quarterly from Davies's hop farm HQ in rural Devon. Having a background in publishing has helped him turn his vision into reality: "I was bored by the generic homebrewing mags out there", says Davies. "It was time there was one that matched the refreshing and creative image of the modern homebrew and craft beer scene."

And it's not just homebrewers who love this magazine; interesting interviews with independent breweries and articles on what's hot - well, cool - in the world of beer, makes MASHED! a vital read for any discerning beer lover. The latest issue boasts interviews with wild fermentation mavericks Wild Beer Co as well as small beer pioneers The Small Beer Brew Co. Plus a reader generated Q&A with yeast experts White Labs.

On top of its solid content, MASHED! Mag is becoming known for its eye catching design thanks, in part, to Davies's collaboration with local multi-media artist Trxtr who has created the bold cover art for the past five issues. Decent eye candy with something to say: MASHED! Mag is clearly a valuable addition to any home bar or man cave!
