NFT STARS Signs a Business Partnership Agreement with Double Trouble Creatives

Thursday 7 October, 2021

The Australian NFT marketplace NFT STARS has signed a business partnership agreement with Double Trouble Creatives, the founding team behind the Moji Edit application. The two teams have come together to share their expertise in launching a new and exciting project in the NFT sphere.

A Secret Project That Pushes Artistic Boundaries

Double Trouble Creatives and NFT STARS will work on reinventing the way people express themselves and convey their message in the digital space. Both companies provide their users with next-generation tools for storytelling; NFT STARS does it in the sphere of NFT art, Double Trouble in the 3D and AR mobile content industry. Double Trouble Creatives is the developer of Moji Edit, an app that enables users to create 3D personalized emojis and emoji sticker libraries that are animated with augmented reality. Driven by the same motives, the two companies are partnering up to bring together their profound expertise and unique experience from their respective backgrounds. By doing so, they plan to launch a new project which promises to be something nobody has seen before in the NFT space.

NFT STARS will share more details about this undisclosed project in future announcements. Until then, you are welcome to take your wildest guess at what this might be... the final result is certain to outshine them all in terms of scale, artistic value, and level of innovation!

"NFT STARS is proud to announce its partnership with Double Trouble Creatives. The Double Trouble team is good at identifying the changing patterns in global communication and then bringing its users new means of expression to suit their creative nature and personality. NFT STARS shares the same vision of empowering creators to stay true to themselves and make a statement in the digital space. We foresee fruitful ventures that the whole NFT space will benefit from. More details will be released soon!" - Dan Khomenko, CEO of NFT STARS and SIDUS.

About Double Trouble Creatives

Double Trouble Creatives is a company founded by identical twin sisters Colina and Hripsime Demirdjian. In 2016, the startup developed and launched Moji Edit, an app that creates personalized emojis and emoji sticker libraries using a customization engine powered by AR and AI. Moji Edit provides its users with hundreds of customized stickers with which they can convey every mood and express themselves in every possible situation. The app has reached an impressive milestone of 10m emojis created worldwide, becoming the top application for emojis.
