Steal the Show: Cyril Williams believes that a business needs to make an impact within a few seconds, whether it be a billboard, a website, a company magazine or an online advert to make it 'steal the show'. Before it's released business owners should ensure imagery, content and design is strong and captivating, and provides the consumer with a reason to go to the website, stand or business.If it doesn't head back to the drawing board.

Abracadabra: Make special offers and promotions that entice the customers by making them surprised to be receiving them.

Now You See it, Now You Don't: Keep the promotion clean cut, take out anything that isn't related to the campaign. Don't list business details etc., they are too overwhelming and will reduce the impact of the promotion.

Don't Be a Ruse: Instead of spamming an entire mailing list, target the promotion to a specific group.Targeting the smaller group will increase engagement rate.

Vanishing Act: To conclude the success of a campaign it is important to keep a track of the results.This will help replicate the success or alter the promotion to achieve the campaign goals. This is easily done by introducing a specific promo code / landing page with an expiry date to monitor revenue generated as a result of the promotion.
