London, March 5th 2020:

Phishing Tackle expands its training, video, and policy content to include free coronavirus advice and cyber-safety tips for home-workers.

PhishingTackle.com, a UK based leading security awareness training company, has today released new free content aimed specifically at helping organisations communicate advice and policies surrounding coronavirus, and the associated increased security risks for home workers.

In addition to Phishing Tackle's commitment to helping organisations' cyber security by providing simulated phishing, security awareness training and policy management, they have now released additional video and policy-based content surrounding the outbreak of coronavirus.

Employers have a duty-of-care to ensure the health and safety of their employees but communicating advice and policies surrounding this can be difficult to circulate and moderate.

Leveraging the existing Policy Management feature of the PhishingTackle.com platform, organisations can now distribute, track and report on this critical guidance and internal policies sent to their employees.

PhishingTackle.com have also released new videos within their comprehensive Media Library covering coronavirus hygiene tips and cyber-security advice for home-workers.

James Houghton, CEO of PhishingTackle.com said:

"It's vital individuals, and their employers, understand the increased cyber security risks associated with home-workers at this difficult time. Educating colleagues and raising their level of cyber security awareness is a must when working, potentially in isolation, at home.

Employers also need a way of distributing and recording acceptance of advice given for compliance purposes, and I am delighted our platform provides this easily, quickly, and at no additional cost to our customers "

PhishingTackle.com have a 14 day free trial which can be used to leverage this new and existing material which also provides unrestricted access to their simulated phishing platform.
