Having a strong and influential business mentor is essential for budding entrepreneurs. The business world is constantly changing and in order to understand how to react and adapt to these changes, entrepreneurs must be constantly learning and seeking out advice. Phoenix Premier Acquisitions believe that although entrepreneurs understand they must find the right support, many don't know where to turn in order to find an experienced and willing mentor.

To help entrepreneurs enhance their business journey and take a proactive approach to finding a mentor, the firm have offered the following advice.

- 1.Be willing to accept mentoring in any way you can

When people think about mentoring they tend to think about one-on-one coaching with someone more experienced. However, in reality, mentoring rarely works out this way. A good mentor is usually a leader in their field, which means they are often incredibly busy making one-on-one guidance and support difficult. This is why entrepreneurs should be prepared and willing to accept mentoring in a range of forms, from online mentoring to a few informal chats.

- 2.Look for mentorship among peers

The term 'Older and Wiser' doesn't apply to mentorship. Often the most valuable and relevant advice can come from an entrepreneur's peers. Instead of looking at mentorship as a hierarchy, entrepreneurs should look at it as an opportunity to share advice and information where all parties involved stand to gain something from the experience.

- 3.Seek multiple mentors

Great mentorship comes from multiple sources, and helps an entrepreneur increase their exposure to a wide range of experiences and knowledge.

- 4.You may already know your mentor

Mentorships are like friendships; to work together and collaborate, entrepreneurs must be able to share some common ground and beliefs in order to communicate effectively. This is why many people end up being mentored by people who share their same social circles.

- 5.Take action

It's one thing learning about new approaches and strategies, but this knowledge is often redundant unless an entrepreneur strives to put it into practice. A good mentor will push an entrepreneur to get out of their comfort zone and try something new, as they know first-hand that action is the best way to fully understand new information.

- 6.Listen

For mentoring to be effective, an entrepreneur needs to know how to listen and take on board everything they are being taught. The more effort an entrepreneur makes to absorb information the greater they will benefit from the experience.
