President of Huobi University Shared His Vision on Higher Education Of Blockchain

Dr. Jianing Yu, President of Huobi University, the education arm of Huobi Group, shared his concerns about how learning has been hindered for learners, educators and all learning institutions under the background of coronavirus breakout.

To address this, a workshop is being co-organized on July 14th, 2020 by SUSS-Singapore University of Social Science and SmartMesh, a leading blockchain based underlying protocol of the Internet of Things.

"More than 33 higher education institutions in China have offered blockchain courses and degree programmes since 2016. As an educational institution rooted in China, we are very excited to work with SUSS and industry colleagues like SmartMesh. The idea is to exchange thoughts and explore possibilities on credential, and degree blockchain education to cultivate and deliver talents for increasing demand followed by the maturity of the blockchain market," said Dr. Jianing Yu.

At Huobi University, it provides an online employment blockchain credential course for internal staff. The course is also available to students and people at the blockchain marketplace who want to grow professionally and get access to more affordable and efficient blockchain education.

Established in 2018, Huobi University has provided training and education programmes in blockchain to more than 30,000 students since 2018 across the globe, including executives from China, U.K. Japan, Australia, South Korea, Malaysia and Indonesia.
