Price Inspector makes a comeback!

Friday 28 June, 2019

PriceInspector, one of the original and independent price comparison sites in the UK that started way back in 2006, is making a comeback in 2019!

Having taken early retirement a few years ago, Price Inspector and his side-kick Sherlock Bones have began solving cases again in a quest to finding you the best deal on millions of products and putting all the expensive products in the slammer.

Online shopping has grown massively in the UK over the past few years, so it's more important than ever that price comparison sites show impartiality and transparency in it's offers and best deals - Price Inspector has scaled back on all of it's advertising and does not have any paid, featured products in its listings so you will only ever see real products at the real price.

So, if you are looking for a new washing machine for the kitchen, a new dining set for the open-plan dining area or a brand spanking new TV to hang on the wall we've got all the latest home products for you.

Or maybe you're looking for the latest fashion labels to strut your stuff in? We've got mens clothing, womens, kids, babies and even pooch fashion (which Sherlock Bones can vouch for).

As Price Inspector gets back into his stride over the coming months, he hopes to bring more retailers on board to help in his mission. In the meantime, head over to https://www.priceinspector.co.uk and get solving your case!
