Award-winning buying agency Prime Purchase is delighted to announce it is bolstering its presence in the M40 wealth corridor.

James Shaw, who has lived in south Oxfordshire, on the edge of the Chilterns, for well over ten years, joins the team after working for two of the largest property agencies in the country covering this patch. James will cover the area stretching from Beaconsfield to south Oxfordshire and west Berkshire, including Pangbourne and Henley.

James will work closely with Prime Purchase's Oxfordshire team, headed up by the vastly experienced Frank Speir. His appointment bolsters an already formidable workforce, giving it the strongest presence in the region of any buying agency.

Charlie Wells, managing director of Prime Purchase, said: 'While London's soaring property market has been well documented, there is a lesser-known stream of wealth trickling out of the capital to the villages and towns along the M40 through the Chiltern Hills. These buyers are looking for better value for money, good schooling and easy commuting to London.

'James' local knowledge, with professional contacts across four counties and comprehensive coverage for country houses, will be invaluable. His straightforward, honest approach allows him to offer unbiased, independent advice to clients, giving them peace of mind that each property has been robustly examined. We are delighted to welcome him to the team.'

With Prime Purchase recently expanding its London team, the business is well placed to take advantage of the certainty set to return to the housing market once the election outcome is known. Business is thriving across the capital, country houses, farms and estates, while Prime Purchase employs an Asia consultant based in Singapore.
