Rezure closes the gap between at-home testing and medical advice

Tuesday 31 March, 2026

Rezure, the UK-based rapid testing provider, has partnered with Doctorcall to offer customers a direct route from self-testing to medical advice. The new partnership gives anyone using Rezure home tests the option to book a discounted consultation with a qualified GP as soon as they have their results.

While Rezure provides at-home kits for everything from nutrient deficiencies and fertility to hormone imbalances and infections, all with results in minutes, people are often left wondering what to do next. Doctorcall provides private GP consultations by phone or video 24/7. Users can get professional advice to understand what their results may mean and decide on next steps without the usual wait for an appointment.

The move comes as access to primary care remains a major hurdle, and reflects a broader shift in how we manage our health. People increasingly choose to check symptoms or track key markers from home, then decide how to act. At the same time, access to GP services remains under pressure, with a record-low 23% of people satisfied with NHS appointment waiting times.

The need is not just for testing, but for timely guidance once a result is in hand. This partnership is designed to close that loop, ensuring a test result isn't just a data point but the start of a clinical conversation. Doctorcall's service supports this with experienced GPs, flexible access, and consultations that can take place from home.

Samir Ullah, Managing Director of Rezure, said:

"For many of our customers, this comes down to timing and clarity. You might take a test on a Sunday evening and not want to sit with unanswered questions for days, or get a result during a busy week and want to speak to a doctor before deciding what to do next. This partnership gives you that option.

You can test at home, then have a clear, practical conversation with a GP while the issue is still current."

How it works for Rezure customers:

- Test at home: Get results for key health markers in private, at a time that suits them
- Talk to a doctor: Skip the routine waiting list with a discounted Doctorcall appointment.
- Get answers: A clear explanation of what the result means and what to do about it.
- Take action: Discuss follow-up care, receive private prescriptions, or referrals where needed.

By bringing testing and clinical advice closer together, Rezure and Doctorcall are making it easier for people to stay on top of their health and act earlier when it matters.
