

Rockers Mogwai Ready To Rock City's Music Hall On UK Tour

Thursday 5 June, 2014

Scots post-rockers Mogwai are lining up to stage a gig at Aberdeen's Music hall to promote their new release Rave Tapes, their eighth studio album and their second on Rock Action, the label they set up almost 18 years ago to issue their debut 7in single, Tuner/Lower.

Frequently championed by John Peel from their early days and famed for their lengthy guitar-based instrumental pieces, the band – Dominic Aitchison (bass), Stuart Braithwaite (guitar, vocals), Martin Bulloch (drums), Barry Burns (keyboard, computer, guitar) and John Cummings (guitar, computer) – will perform in the city on Tuesday, October 21.

And tickets for the gig go on sale this Friday (June 6) online at www.aberdeenperformingarts.com, by phone at 01224 641122 and at Aberdeen Box Office at the Music Hall and His Majesty's Theatre.

Formed in 1995 initially as a quartet before joined by Barry, the quintet have established themselves on the international stage through a prolific recorded output and a commitment to touring that few of their peers can match.

Created in the summer 2013 in the band's Castle of Doom studio in Glasgow, the new album marks the latest phase in the group's increasingly substantial canon – since the start of the decade, Mogwai have released four full-length records, one live album, two EPs and three singles.

On top of that, they've had a pancontinental live schedule in support of one of those albums, Hardcore Will Never Die, But You Will, plus a myriad festival appearances.

In the past year, the band have broadened their reach with the soundtrack to the acclaimed Canal+ supernatural drama series Les Revenants (retitled The Returned when broadcast on Channel 4 last summer).

As the show reached its climax on UK TV screens in July, Mogwai returned to the most conspicuous predecessor to Les Revenants in their catalogue, the 2007 soundtrack to Douglas Gordon and Philippe Pareno's film Zidane: A 21st-century Portrait, in sell-out performances in Manchester, Glasgow and London's Barbican, the band playing live while the film was projected above them.

Mogwai background info

Clocking in at just under 50 minutes, the 10-track album Rave Tapes is a lustrous collection mined from the same quarry as its predecessors, wreathed in painterly textures underpinned by increasingly electronic beats. The haunted strains of Deesh channel the slow-burning ecstasy of their 2006 song Auto Rock (a key presence in the denouement of Michael Mann's film of Miami Vice that year) while the guitars on which Mogwai built their reputation remain, if for the most part less overtly belligerent this time round, as evidenced by the somnambulant opener Heard About You Last Night and the sonic scowl of HexonBogon. With Rave Tapes, Mogwai's mastery of sound and space is firmly at its apex.

Mogwai are Dominic Aitchison (bass), Stuart Braithwaite (guitar, vocals), Martin Bulloch (drums), Barry Burns (keyboard, computer, guitar) and John Cummings (guitar, computer). They formed in Glasgow in 1995 as a quartet, with Burns yet to come into the fold. After a succession of well-received releases and having developed a reputation for their fearsome live shows, Mogwai signed to Glasgow independent Chemikal Underground, with whom they released their debut long-player Mogwai Young Team (1997) and its follow-up, Come On Die Young (1999), recorded in upstate New York with Dave Fridmann (Mercury Rev, Flaming Lips) and the first Mogwai album to feature Burns.

At the turn of the millennium Mogwai left Chemikal Underground to sign with PIAS, in large part for its European network, and in 2001 released Rock Action, reaching No23 in the UK album chart. Again produced by Fridmann, the record found the group introducing more electronic tones to their palette, a broadening of scope furthered on Happy Songs For Happy People (2003), the album that saw the band making substantial progress in the US.

Aside from Government Commissions, 2005's compilation of BBC radio sessions, almost three years would pass before Mogwai's fifth studio full-length, Mr Beast (2006), saw the light of day. Co-produced by the band and Tony Doogan (the sole producer of Happy Songs), Mr Beast was described by the band's

Related Sectors:

Entertainment & Arts ::

Related Keywords:

Rockers Mogwai ::

Scan Me:

then manager Alan McGee as “probably the best art rock album I've been involved with since [My Bloody Valentine's] Loveless”. A year later, Mogwai released their soundtrack to Zidane: A 21st-century Portrait, and a further 12 months on came the release of the band's first album away from PIAS and their first entirely self-produced long-player, The Hawk Is Howling (2008).

The band's appetite for greater control was not, however, limited to the studio. Having used Rock Action largely as a platform for releases by such artists as Envy, Errors and Part Chimp, in 2010 Mogwai made the decision to issue their own records on the label as well, beginning with Special Moves, the audio counterpart to the live film Burning, both of which featured Mogwai performing in Brooklyn on their 2008-09 US tour. That same year, Mogwai and Matador ended their long relationship and the band signed to Sub Pop ahead of the 2011 release of Hardcore Will Never Die, But You Will, an expansive, confident set which entered the UK album chart at No25 and spawned three singles. (The recording sessions also yielded the four-track EP Earth Division, the band's 10th such release.) A year later the album A Wrenched Virile Lore, featuring remixes of songs from Hardcore... by an eclectic array of artists including Justin Broadrick, Tim Hecker and Xander Harris, was released, providing listeners with an entirely new set of perspectives from which to view Mogwai's increasingly adroit creations.

Having barely had time to draw breath, the ever-restless band members kicked off 2013 with the release of the Les Revenants EP and parent album to keep fans occupied while writing sessions for Rave Tapes took place in Glasgow and Berlin, where Burns moved some years ago with his wife Rachel, an artist. Displaying a work ethic to shame bands of all ages and stripes, Mogwai entered their Castle Of Doom studio in the wake of summer's live Zidane shows and began making the victorious, beatific tracks that comprise Rave Tapes. The release of the album will signal the beginning of a frantic year of live activity, including the group's maiden foray into Africa . Fasten your seatbelts.

-Ends-

Press contact:

Joyce Summers, Press Manager at Aberdeen Performing Arts,

Tel: 01224 337641

Mob: 07919 565156

Email: joyce.summers@aberdeenperformingarts.com

Aberdeen Performing Arts is a charity registered in Scotland No: SC033733

Company Contact:

—

Pressat Wire

E. [support\[\]@pressat.co.uk](mailto:support[]@pressat.co.uk)

View Online

Newsroom: Visit our Newsroom for all the latest stories:
<https://www.wire.pressat.co.uk>